

PISA RESULTS : CALLING UPON OECD FOR A DEEPER ANALYSIS OF THE NOWADAYS PUPILS VALUES

ADOPTED BY EUPAS BOARD // DECEMBER 2016

EUPAS, as the biggest pupils organization from Europe has paid attention to the recently presented PISA Results by OECD. Last years we have insisted and fought for the development of the educational systems around Europe. Our strong believe is that nowadays educational systems should emphasize themselves on inspiring pupils to critical thinking, creativity and personal development through learning the basic courses such as: Mathematics, Physics, Main Language and others.

Some factors, as ones stated above were not researched in the study and we express our awareness that the results do not reflect the reality. Since decades, education has developed. Now we can affirm that the excellent pupils results and performance at a set of courses do not define a educational system as a good one. The ability of a system to generate trainers and teachers which can inspire creativity, freedom, critical thinking, professional understanding and a generally mental well-being are the values of a modern education which we strongly consider to be valuable.

We express our hope that in the next year's PISA, some more factors will be included in the research and EUPAS is ready to offer the whole support in achieving the goals listed above. Nonetheless we see the new PISA test category of "solving problems in a group" as a big progress and we are looking forward for the results of this category.
